THE silver debate closed in the House Saturday, after such big guns as Bourke Cochran, W. L. Wilson and Czar Reed had unlimbered their batteries and let loose their dogs of war. All were for the repeal of the Sherman law, but Mr. Reed could not rise above the plane of party and partisanship and his speech was more of plea for republican principles than an effort for the public good. He charged, of course, that the present financial distress was dre more to the uncertainty of the future in regard to tariff was a candidate for the presidency last play for a grand victory in December. year. He has not only not forgiven Mr. Cleveland for snowing him under so far out of sight, but his bitterness seems to president, but he would do so "unawed patronage." He did not hastly join with him in the rosy conclusion that the financial millennium is to come the moment the Sherman law is removed. There were some who had given the subject attention who believe the cause of beyond the Sherman bill, and that its ical crime in which they took part. foundations were laid in the evil hours of 1873, when the country unwillingly laid aside the financial policy that had been its guide since the foundation of government. TO All Tax-Payers.

The 1Son Taxes are now past due and will be collected in the Sheriff's office at the court-house and by special appointments as prescribed by the new revenue law Deputy Sheriff O. P. New land will be in Crab Orchard every Saturday. I or my deputy will be in my office at all times and at Hostonwille, Waynesburg and other points as of-ten as advertised by Sheriff sofficial notices. The new form of Sheriff's back-keeping has rendered it impossible for us to canvass for taxes this year, as we have heretofore done; so all taxes will be collected strictly in conformance to the new revenue law. Every tax-payer whose tax remains unpaid after November 1st will find his property or lands advertised without further notice. The financial crisis which new exists makes it absolutely received to the collection of the collections.
